

Terms and conditions for Axon Question Time

The opportunity to contact Axon Lawyers in an Axon Question Time session is intended for discussion of general legal issues, to give you general guidance and to help you assess whether any question you may have might require follow up with legal advice, whether by Axon Lawyers or another lawyer or law firm.

The guidance provided is not intended to be comprehensive and should not be relied upon as legal advice in any specific circumstances. Consequently, any information exchanged by you and a lawyer of Axon Lawyers in a Question Time session should not be taken as legal advice. Also, the fact that you exchange information with a lawyer of Axon Lawyers does not establish a client/attorney relationship between you and Axon Lawyers. Because unsolicited confidential information outside a formal attorney-client relationship is not subject to an attorney-client privilege, you should not disclose confidential information to us in Question Time conversations. Furthermore, while we will treat any information divulged to us confidentially, Axon Lawyers will not consider itself conflicted out of any future or pending matter as a result of information divulged in a Question Time session.

Please note that simply contacting a lawyer of Axon Lawyers through a Question Time session does not create an attorney-client relationship until an agreement has been reached between you and Axon Lawyers to handle a particular matter for you.

If you require legal advice in relation to a specific issue, Axon Lawyers will be happy to assist with your enquiry and the formal process of engagement must be followed.
